The People of Bethlehem

Claire Nagelhout

The content of this book is mainly focused on street photography. I chose to photograph people in both the South and North Bethlehem area. I focused on trying to go unnoticed when taking my pictures so I could capture candid moments among people I found on the streets. Many of these photos were taken the weekends before and after St. Patrick's Day so I was lucky that many people took to the streets to celebrate. I wanted to capture people, of all ages, back out on the streets in the beginning of spring, after a long cold winter, and after almost a year of many people staying home due to COVID. Most people I saw on the streets when I went out to shoot these photos were wearing masks and outside being safe, yet they were clearly still able to enjoy the weather and the holiday, and I hope I captured that in my photos.
